Report to the Community

The 2013-2014 Academic Year
2014 has been a milestone year for San Diego City College.

As the first community college in San Diego and the fifth in the state, San Diego City College joins only a handful of educational institutions in the country to celebrate its Centennial. From humble beginnings with only a few classrooms and a handful of students, the college now serves nearly 17,000 students and expects to grow to 25,000 within the decade. San Diego City College represents 1/5 of the downtown footprint of San Diego, encompassing 60 acres between the East Village and Balboa Park.

2014 was also the year of new leadership for City College. In August, I was welcomed as the new president of City College. Then, in November, we welcomed Seher Awan as our new Vice President of Administrative Services. Additionally, over the past year, we have hired 24 new faculty members, who are tops in their fields.

With the expansive growth and transformation of our urban campus, I used my first college convocation to set forth an invitation for a new focus and vision at City College. In essence, the four-part vision is that San Diego City College become the national leader in advancing Social Justice and Civility, increasing Access and Completion, transitioning Adult Learners, and building Community Connections.

I cannot stress the importance of building and strengthening community connections and partnerships. From the outpouring of community support during our Centennial, it is obvious San Diegans cherish our 100-year-old college and consider it a tremendous asset. As we move into our second century, we will focus on establishing new and deeper business and industry relationships. Additionally, we will open more dialogue with community-based organizations and their constituencies that share the same social change/justice values as City College. These organizations promote areas such as community development, environmental stewardship, veteran support, a strong middle class, and youth service clubs. Helping related community-based organizations be successful is one important way City College can reconnect with the community and give back in a way consistent with our broader social change mission.

Working together with our 1,200-plus faculty and staff, our industry and organizational partners, and our students and alumni, we are excited to begin our 101st year. I look forward to seeing you on campus. Here’s to helping our community grow stronger and to the next 100 years at City College!
Jim Sinegal
Distinguished Alumnus ’53-55
Jim Sinegal, co-founder and retired CEO of COSTCO Wholesale was honored as the Distinguished Alumnus at the San Diego City College Foundation Centennial Gala on September 8, 2014. Before 300 Gala attendees, Jim recalled fond memories from his time at City College (then called San Diego Junior College) in the early 50s.

“My experience at San Diego City College was indeed life changing for me, and I’m sure it’s been life changing for a lot of students over the years.”

Jim Sinegal
Distinguished Alumnus ’53-55

How City College changed Jim’s life
You know, San Diego Junior College had a major impact on me. I had kind of lost my confidence at that point. I had been misdirected and had to get back to the game. I probably would not have gotten a college education if I hadn’t been going to San Diego Junior College. I didn’t stay just the one semester. I completed two years and got my AA degree.

The value of education
I’ve always considered how lucky I was to be able to go to a school like San Diego JC, then transfer to San Diego State University, and do it for such a low price. I’ve always considered this to be the greatest value in education in the world.

The City College experience
What a fantastic experience. It was literally life changing for me. I became a student again. I became engaged in what was going on and made lifelong friends at the San Diego JC (Junior College) that I’m still friendly with today.

The City College challenge
Competition was tough. We had a lot of good students and a matter of fact, we had the added competition of a lot of vets coming home from the Korean War at that time, and they were very serious about school. They raised the bar for all of us who were going to school at that point. I think I can say that I flourished there. I did.

About being honored by City College
It’s a little bit awkward for me…. It’s wonderful that you would do that, but I should really be honoring you when you think about the hundreds and thousands of lives that you’ve changed, people like me who had gone adrift and needed to get back on target and did get back on target. And I owe it to City College. There is just no question about it.

Centennial Trolley Car
Launch
Wednesday, September 10, 2014
Welcome the new City College Centennial Trolley Car, featuring the “Agents of Change” portrait series, as it makes its inaugural run into the City College Trolley Station. The City College Centennial Trolley will arrive at 10:50 am*. Trolley Station: 1155 C Street (at C and 11th streets)
* Time subject to trolley schedule.

Trained by certificated faculty who are experienced professionals in their specific fields, City College apprentices complete training on all aspects of a job, from the basics to the advanced. A City College apprentice can also earn an AA degree by completing additional academic credits.

Creating partnerships between the college and local industries provides students with lifelong career skills and employers with highly qualified workers. Nearly 500 students are enrolled in City College apprenticeship programs each semester and another 200 students through Continuing Education. More than 150 students receive apprenticeship completion certificates (“Journeyman Certificates”) each year.

“On behalf of MTS, I would like to thank City College for the academic apprenticeship program that has been training the Trolley’s maintenance employees in the Light Rail Vehicle, Wayside and Revenue departments for more than 25 years.”

- Harry Mathis, Chair, MTS Board of Directors

The City College Apprenticeship program works with several community employers offering training in numerous trades, including:

Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) for Construction Electronic Systems Technician, Electrical, Piping, Plumbing, Sheet Metal and Heating, Ventilation, & Air Conditioning | Honeywell Tool and Die; San Diego City Civil Service Communications Technician; San Diego Gas and Electric; San Diego Transit Electronic Technician; San Diego Trolley Light Rail Vehicle Lineman and Revenue Maintainer; and Solar Turbines.

Apprenticeship at City College

“T o the credit of everyone here today, City College continues to be a vital and important educational institution for thousands of San Diegans and MTS is proud of its 100-year long association with City College.”

Harry Mathis, Chair, MTS Board of Directors

The first home of San Diego City College was the “Old Gray Castle,” seen here in 1914. City College was the first community college in San Diego with 34 students and 4 instructors.

Well known for its workforce development and training programs, the college has launched the careers of nurses, graphic designers, broadcasters and business leaders.

As it celebrates its centennial, City College today occupies 60 acres on the eastern edge of downtown, an urban campus that boasts $450 million worth of classrooms and labs built in the past few years. It enrolls 18,000 students each fall.

“It’s almost like voters dropped from the sky this gift of an institution that is so worthy, and it is really incredible what is possible with these facilities,” said (Professor Candice) Lopez, referring to the $1.55 billion in bond measures financing the San Diego Community College District’s recent building boom.

Anthony Beebe, president of City College, marveled at the foresight of city and school leaders to create San Diego Junior College, the fifth such institution in the state. (The name changed to City College in 1961.) He said many community colleges in California weren’t formed until the 1960s.

Steven Schoenherr, a retired University of San Diego history professor, wrote a 252-page book on City College. He said he didn’t know much about the college and the important role it played in the city before his project, including the way the development of the campus spawned downtown urban renewal following World War II.

In recent years, City College has been recognized for the amount of community service performed by its students, for its efforts to encourage research and for its jazz radio station.

City College is “one of the friendliest places you could ever be” where students help other students and teachers focus on helping students be successful.

Beebe said his vision for the college moving ahead is to take a leadership role in promoting social responsibility and civility and to address such topics as homelessness, environmental issues and human trafficking and to encourage students to try to find solutions.

City College First Year Experience (FYE) Program Earns Innovation of the Year Award

The League for Innovation in the Community College, an international organization dedicated to making a positive difference in community college education, recognized San Diego City College’s First Year Experience (FYE) program for its outstanding service to incoming first-year students.

FYE Program Director Bonnie Peters said, “City College’s First Year Services has revolutionized the concept of the community college’s First Year Experience. Its one-of-a-kind format prioritizes efforts toward student equity and student success.” With a focus on peer mentoring, course requirements, educational planning, regular follow-up, and community service, the reinvention of FYE allowed the program to increase student volume from serving 150 to serving nearly 2000 students annually.

Among California community colleges, City’s exceptional approach to First Year Services serves as a model for determining first-year student success. While FYE has many components such as Priority Registration Incentive, Accelerated courses, and the Summer FYE Bridge program, one of its most successful activities is the on-campus Student Success Day. Attracting more than a thousand students and parents, this annual summer event is dedicated to providing students access to campus resources such as orientation, assessment, Financial Aid, and educational planning all in one place in one day.

City College Students Earn Prestigious Award

City College graduates Bryce Schierenbeck, 35, and Marikris Racho, 22, are two of only 85 scholars in the nation selected this year to receive the prestigious Jack Kent Cooke Foundation Undergraduate Transfer Scholarship. The largest scholarship of its kind in the nation, Jack Kent Cooke recipients can be awarded $30,000 annually for up to three years to pursue four-year degrees at any accredited college or university in the United States and abroad. Awarded to students who demonstrate exceptional promise and who have financial need, the scholarships may provide funding for tuition, room, board, required fees, and books for the length of the undergraduate degree.

Marikris Racho
city college biology major with a 4.0 GPA.
A Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society member and first in her family to graduate, Marikris serves as a peer educator for the City College Mental Health Services, and volunteered 300 hours of community service as a Price Scholar.

Bryce Schierenbeck
city college business major with a 4.0 GPA.
A 7-year Army veteran, Bryce helped to establish City College’s Veteran Support Center and the student organization Veterans for Peace. Bryce is attending the Walter H. Haas School of Business at UC Berkeley to obtain a bachelor’s degree in business management, and next plans to pursue a Juris Doctorate and an M.B.A. simultaneously.

Scholarships

Through the San Diego City College Foundation, City College offers more than 50 scholarships. For the 2013-14 academic year, 227 students received 517 scholarships totaling $330,000, with 38 students earning multiple awards.

With City College’s expansion now to Broadway Street, the 60-acre campus comprises nearly one-fifth of the downtown footprint. The new state-of-the-art classroom buildings include the Career Technology Center for Photography and Digital Arts, Nursing and Cosmetology; Math and Social Sciences; Arts and Humanities; Business Technology; and Science. The Science building includes a Planetarium, rooftop observatory, and outdoor teaching gardens.

President Neault said, “With our new instructional and training facilities, we have many more opportunities to expand our outreach into the community and to strengthen our industry partnerships.”

In addition to classrooms for its 17,000 students, City College has opened a new Corporate Education Center at 16th and C Street with rentable meeting spaces for local businesses and organizations. City College hosted the San Diego Regional Economic Development Corporation’s Governor’s Economic Development Initiative (GEDI) and San Diego’s Manufacturing Day.

The Alonzo award is named after Alonzo Horton, who purchased most of the land in downtown San Diego in the 1860s and envisioned it as a center of commerce for San Diego. The Alonzo Award is presented in recognition of those whose efforts have contributed significantly to the enhancement and enrichment of Downtown San Diego in the last year.

City College faculty members, Veronica C. Ortega, Ph.D., Psychology Professor in the Department of Behavioral Sciences and the Coordinator for the Institute for Human Development, and Paul Greer, Professor of Health and Exercise Science, earned the distinguished John & Suanne Roueche Excellence Award at the 2014 League for Innovation in Anaheim, California on March 5.

Recognized for their exceptional contributions to teaching, leadership and learning by the League for Innovation in the Community College, Ortega and Greer lead the campus-wide Step Up to Live Well campaign.

Both Ortega and Greer wholeheartedly agree that the success of the Step Up to Live Well Campaign is due to the hard work of an exuberant college team and the support of the County of San Diego.

Greer, who coaches the college’s men’s cross country team and the San Diego Track Club, as well as directs the Rock ‘n’ Roll Marathon’s training program, said, “Step Up to Live Well is all about promoting fitness, good nutrition and behavioral health across our campus.”

San Diego City College was honored with the 2013 Alonzo Award at the San Diego Downtown Partnership’s 51st Annual Alonzo Awards Dinner on October 10.

City College Interim President Lynn Neault accepted the Alonzo Award before a dinner crowd of nearly 600 at the San Diego Marriott Marquis and Marina.

Kris Michell, President and CEO of the Downtown San Diego Partnership commented, “City College is an instrumental partner in the ongoing development of downtown San Diego. Just as East Village has been transformed, the college campus now has a completely new look and is a higher-education gateway into downtown.”

San Diego City College is the only institution in the country to earn all three Military Friendly® designations: the 2015 Military Friendly® Employer, Military Spouse Friendly Employer®, and Military Friendly School® designation by Victory Media, publisher of G.I. Jobs® and Military Spouse.

“It’s very rare for an institution to receive two designations, much less three, and to do it twice in row”, advised James Lee, Regional Consultant for Victory Media. San Diego City College earned all three designations for the first time last year (for 2014). While 2014 was the first year for the college to earn the Military Friendly Employer and Military Spouse Friendly Employer designation, City College has been a Military Friendly School for 6 years (including 2015).

San Diego City College (SDCC), a Navy College Program Distance Learning Partner, has been providing technical training to the Navy for over 37 years, with service in as many as 14 states at 35 locations in the U.S. City College training programs have included basic courses in Administration, Supply, Combat Systems, Engineering, Electronics, Personal Financial Management, Instructor Training, Avionics, Leadership, and Seamanship. In addition, SDCC has provided advanced courses, including Military “C” Schools, Culinary Arts, Air Traffic Control, and Fundamental Applied Skills.

The Military Friendly® Schools designation is awarded to the top 15 percent of colleges, universities and trade schools in the country that are doing the most to embrace military students, and to dedicate resources to ensure their success in the classroom and after graduation.

All New!
The 98,000 square foot Science building houses four floors of new classrooms, labs, and state-of-the-art technology for the Life Sciences and Physical Sciences programs, including: Agriculture, Biology, Sustainability; and Astronomy, Chemistry, Geography, Geographic Information Systems, Geology, Physical Science, and Physics.
The building also has a fourth-floor observation deck, a stunning new planetarium, and a beautiful outdoor patio area that includes a hands-on teaching garden. The landscape materials include native and drought tolerant plants.
The building includes many special features such as sunshade devices to reduce solar heat gain and glare, and light shelves that harvest daylight to reduce energy demands from artificial lighting, reducing eyestrain. Additionally, all windows utilize high performance glass that allows sunlight to filter into the building, but reduces the amount of UV light and solar heat entering the building.

“The Science Building starts a new era for science here at City College. The cutting edge technology and instruction in this building provides our students with the edge they deserve and need as they go on to their careers.”

It takes several years of pre-planning to launch a 100-year Anniversary celebration. Contacting alumni, gathering stories and memories, collecting old photos and memorabilia, and researching the college history was just the start. Then we developed a Centennial logo, a commemorative Centennial pin, a Centennial website, wrote a 252-page book, and planned the many celebrations. Take a look at just some of the highlights of the City College Centennial year...

City College students, staff and friends worked hundreds of long hours to create the Centennial parade float for the 2014 MLK Parade. PCAC South Men's Basketball Co-Most Valuable Players
Caleb Singleton and Martin Thomas

The men's basketball team won their fourth conference championship under 10-year Head Coach Mitch Charlens. The Knights went 8-0 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Conference South, 21-9 overall, and advanced to the second round of the California Community College Athletic Association playoffs.

Badminton Coach of the Year
Son Nguyen

The women's badminton team won their third consecutive Pacific Coast Athletic Conference championship after finishing the regular season with an undefeated (6-0) record. The Knights also advanced to their third straight California Community College Athletic Association (CCCAA) state championship match, but lost to an outstanding De Anza team. It was the sixth time that Head Coach Son Nguyen has led the Knights to the state title match, with the Knights winning in 2006, 2007, 2008, and 2012.
