Five Facts
You Might Not Know About UCLA

1. Undergraduate research. Every year, thousands of UCLA students take part in seminars, research tutorials and departmental honors programs. Many students perform important, publishable research in close collaboration with senior faculty. Two undergraduate research centers — one for humanities and social sciences, the other for life and physical sciences — help students identify faculty mentors from every discipline.

2. Real-world classroom. Bruins merge academics with practical, hands-on experience through local and national internships. Each year a high percentage of students participate in paid, unpaid and for-credit internships in a variety of fields: law, business, entertainment, engineering, government and more.

3. Honors and Undergraduate Programs offer a community atmosphere in small, interdisciplinary courses. It encourages extensive interaction between students and faculty across campus — including the graduate professional schools.

4. The UCLA International Institute, a division of the College of Letters and Sciences, is one of the world’s premier centers of international education, offering interdepartmental degrees and education abroad. Its research focuses on major world regions and on global issues that cut across regional boundaries.

5. UCLA’s Academic Advancement Program (AAP) is the nation’s largest undergraduate academic support program. AAP welcomes students of all socioeconomic backgrounds and encourages academic achievement through a variety of resources such as: tutoring, personal and academic counseling, career guidance, graduate mentoring, scholarships and research.
